Ball Turned Up Gold.
RHYOLITE (Builfrog Mining District), NEVADA, June 23.—At the base-ball game the other day between the towns of Rivolite and Beatty, William Griffith, of Salt Lake City, playing first base for the Rhyolite team, reached down to stop a fast grounder, with vision of an easy put out for his team, when the ball struck a small stone and bounded away. While waiting for the ball to be returned by one of the spectators Griffith picked up the stone, which he found to be full of free gold.

The company superintendent at ofce ordered a shaft sunk on the spot, in addition to the shaft aiready being sunk at snother location on the property. Less than 800 feet Away, at a depth of 83 feet, this shaft has already disclosed a formation that makes it a certainty that the shaft is on a ledge that is a continuation of one of the famous ledges here. It is reported that Griffith has been affered 25,000 profit for the interest he secured.

COMMISSION AROUSED OVER WHITEWASHING OF MORTON

Members of Interstate Commerce Board Critisize President Sharply and Relate Some History of Santa Fe Case.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
WASHINGTON, June 22.—The summary manner in which the President disposed of the Sante Fe case and vetoed the presecution of Secretary Morton, which was advised and urged by the special counsel employed to ferret out the facts, has aroused the antagonism of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which referred the record in the case to the Department of Justice for action, firmly believing that it constituted grounds for criminal proceedings.

The members of the commission think too well of their jobs to give out any formal interviews on the subject, but in a private conversation they do not formal interviews on the subject, but in a private conversation they do not hesitate to express their real opinions. They say the President has not stated the case fairly, and that he has not related the facts regarding Mr. Morton's connection with it.

In his letter of absolution to Mr. Morton, the President told him that he (Morton), and he alone, had the courage to go before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the packing house products case and give the facts regarding the whole system of paying secret rebates by the railroads.

The commissioners declars that this is

The commissioners declare that this is not the fact. They say that after subordinates had denied the existence of the robating system, which the commissioners knew was in full force, the commissioners decided to pay no more attention to the small fry, and summoned the highest officials. The officials held a conference before they appeared to testify, and concluded to make a clean breast of it, Mr. Morton, it is stated, was only one of many officials who admitted only one of many officials who admitted the general payment of rebates, and told how the system was worked. These confessions were made in the fall of 1991.

The commissioners say also that the President was misinformed when he put the case of the Sante Fe and the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company on the same footing with that of the International Harvester Company. In the latter case the Western pany. In the latter case the Westers railroads including the Burlington, North railroads including the Burlington, North-western, Rock Island, Wisconsin Central and Chicago Great Western, returned a certain percentage of the freight pay-ments to the Harvester Company in con-sideration of the fact that it owned its own switching tracks at Chicago. These payments were not denied, the railroads cliaming that they were legitimate. The Interstate Commerce Commission held that they were excessive and constituted in effect a rebate. When the general injunction against the payment of rebates was issued the Harvester case was included, though it was not specifically meritioned. The roads interested have compiled with the 'injunction, but have allowed the Harvester Company a rebate of $3.50 a car, which the commission fixed as a reasonable allowance.

In the case in which are Morton is as a reasonable allowance.

In the case in which Mr. Morton is interested the Sante Fe published a freight tarin on coal of $4.05 a ton. By a secret arrangement, this included the price of the coal, $1.55 a ton, which was rebated to the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. The injunction which was issued against rebating was aimed at this particular case, but the Sante Fe continued to pay the rebate for a long time after the injunction was granted. This, in the opinion of the commissioners, makes it a very different case from that of the Harvester Company.

Dunne Changes Front. Dunne Changes Front.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 23.—Mayor Dunne has changed front in the traction dispute. He has demanded that the traction interests name a lump sum as the value of their entire property, including franchises, at this time. He also insists on proceeding at once with the plans for the immediate construction of a one hundred mile municipal system, using the expired passenger railway route as a down-town trunk line. As a consequence there is a deadlook between the Mayor and the traction interests.
